economic crisis as an opportunity to reorient, restructure, and reengage in community policing and problem solving activities using the best practices that have evolved nationally over the past 20 years. Organizational transformation occurs as the Department moves forward (with fewer managers, mid-managers, and line staff), reexamines the mission statement and strategic plan, and institutionalizes the practice of community policing agency-wide by using a broad range of community resources involving both public and private partnerships. A more enlightened, empowered, and emancipated citizenry will emerge embracing the community policing philosophy of a personalized partnership with Police.
